Four Social Styles

ANALYTICAL: Low Responsiveness, Low Assertiveness

Analytical people can appear unsociable, especially to Amiables and Expressives. They may seem serious and indecisive. This is because they need to look at every conceivable angle before they feel satisfied. A consequence of this is that they are persistent in their questioning and focus on detail and facts. However, once they have made a decision, they stick with it as they invariably feel that it is infallible.

In conflict, they can "whine", become sarcastic and are often negative.

Summary:

Characteristics: Serious, mull matters over, Indecisive, persistent, ask lots of questions, attention to detail.

In conflict: whining, sarcastic, negative

Solution: Keep to the facts, Don't agree with them, listen attentively

Basic Need: To be correct

DRIVER: Low responsiveness, high assertiveness

Drivers are task orientated and expect efficiency from everyone they come into contact with. Little emphasis is placed on building relationships with other people. They can be perceived as aggressive and uncaring, especially by amiables, though are often needed to take risks and push things through. In conflict, they will try to "steam roller" over anyone who comes in their way.

Summary:

Characteristics: Task orientated, clearly defined goals, committed, determined, risk takers, efficient.

In conflict: Aggressive, rude, abrupt,

Solutions: Be assertive and firm, have a solution to the problem, listen.

Basic Need: To be in control

Four Social Styles

AMIABLE: (High Responsiveness, Low Assertiveness)

The amiable person likes other people's company, though is more of a listener than a talker. Expressive people find them useful, because they are prepared to listen to what they are saying. They are loyal, personable and show patience when dealing with other people.

They may however not be perceived as people " who get things done " because they spend more time developing relationships with others. They are also unlikely to take risks as they need to have the feeling of security.

In difficult situations, they are likely to avoid the situation and lack conviction of their feelings and if pushed likely to make promises that they cannot keep. Drivers often find them frustrating because they want a straight answer and the amiable can find this difficult to deliver.

Summary:

Characteristics: Loyal, personable, patient, Uncomfortable with risk, Non-Confrontational, Dislike pressure, Enjoy the company of others.

In conflict: Likely to be " passive", lack conviction, avoidance,

Solution: Reassure, Support, Confirm commitment

Basic Need: Security

EXPRESSIVE: (High Responsiveness, High Assertiveness)

The expressive likes the company of other people, though unlike, the amiable this is because they need to " express " themselves. Amiables complement them very well, unless the expressive becomes too aggressive and puts them off.

They can be good people to have at a party, because they're enthusiastic, dramatic and "interesting" people to have around. However, if they don't receive the attention they crave, they can get upset and even "difficult" to deal with.

In conflict, they become emotional, prone to exaggeration and unpredictable. The best way to deal with this is to let them calm down. Try not to fuel the fire by saying anything controversial.

Summary:

Characteristics: People orientated, centre of attention, positive, emotional, talkative, enthusiastic, dramatic.

In conflict: Unpredictable, emotional.

Solutions: Allow them time to gain composure, Ask questions, problem solve.

Basic Need: Recognition

 3. I usually spend more than an hour on the internet surfing or chatting at one time.

Now add up the numbers that you have circled _____

14

The higher the total, the more you need to work on time management skills now that you are in VCE. If your total is more than 10, you probably need to adjust your priorities and begin to take more responsibility for managing your time. If you scored more than 10, be sure to do Part 2!!

From Michigan Tech, www.exsel.mtu.edu

Part 2 If you scored more than 10 in Part 1, this exercise will help you to really look at how you spend your time and provide a practical way for you to start taking charge of managing your time more successfully.

Each week has 168 hours (24 hours X 7 days). Analyse how much time you spend in an average week on sleep, leisure, meals, chores, exercise, transportation, work, family responsibilities, classes and studying. Look at the following example of a time analysis:

Hours per activity in a seven-day week
Sleep	56 hours
Leisure/free time	8 hours
Meals	14 hours
Chores	5 hours
Exercise	5 hours
Transportation	5 hours
Work	15 hours
Family	5 hours
Classes	30 hours
Studying	15 hours
Total	150 hours

In this example, 158 of the 168 hours a week are committed, leaving 10 hours of flexible time. Flexible time is important so you can deal with unexpected pleasant events such as being given tickets to a concert, or unpleasant events such as getting sick.

Without flexible time, you may find it difficult to catch up those hours you lose when you are sick. Also, sometimes things take longer than you anticipated. With flexible time, you can catch up with your textbook reading even though your assignment takes longer than you expect.

Make sure you have enough flexible time to easily juggle commitments and avoid stress caused by a too tightly planned schedule. Without this time, you may not be able to keep working towards your goals, and you may have to re-examine them, prioritise them and postpone the less important.

Now complete your own time analysis. How much flexible time do you have? Use the table on the next page to do your analysis.

Speech (Agricultural sector)

Good Morning sir and everyone, Today I am giving a speech on Agricultural Sector.

Agriculture is the backbone of Indian economy. It is practiced in our Country for thousands of years. Over a period of time, it has developed a lot. Now in this modern era, the use of new technologies and equipment have replaced almost all the traditional methods of farming. This Agricultural evolution not only contributed to the growth of itself but also of the ^{other} Sector of the country. India largely depends on Agricultural Sector. Although for thousands of years, we are practicing agriculture still, it remained under developed for long time. But we are trying our best. Like post-Independence, we use to import food grains from other countries to fulfill our demand. But after the green revolution, we become self sufficient and started exporting our surplus to other countries. we use to depend completely on monsoon for the cultivation of food grains but now we have constructed dams, canals, etc. In Agricultural Sector, there are 3 subsectors, like Input Sector, Agri and allied Sectors and Output Sector.
